

RENEWABLE ENERGY IN SIKKIM

RACHANA RAI¹ & NEETA D. SHARMA²

¹Assistant Professor, Department of Management Studies, Sikkim Manipal Institute of Technology, Sikkim, India

²Associated Professor, Department of Management Studies, Sikkim Manipal Institute of Technology, Sikkim, India

ABSTRACT

Sikkim is the least populous state in India yet it has managed to create its own niche. With the rise in global warming, erratic weather conditions and numerous diseases, a paradigm shift in renewable energy has taken place. With the formation of SREDA, Sikkim has taken a step forward in creating an awareness and encouraging the usage of renewable energy at various institutions. The paper focuses on the accomplishments of SREDA and its present status.

KEYWORDS: Northeast Region, Mainstream of Renewable Energy, Developing Countries, Sikkim